Mission & What We Do

Create pathways to successful futures by sparking reading and bonding at birth.

We are an all-volunteer organization which provides books & reading encouragement to low-income families in St. Louis who have just delivered a baby. Every dollar goes toward books and bags, so every donation directly impacts metro area families. Bookbags with five age-appropriate books are delivered to the mother and included in the bag is a card to encourage reading and bonding. We recently expanded our programs to include delivery of older age-appropriate books to our newborns' Big Brothers Big Sisters. There isn't one cause of poor literacy among low-income children. But easy access to books is one of the biggest obstacles to equalizing children's literacy.

Goals

Encourage early reading to families who need it most.

Quantity & quality of book reading in early infancy predicts the size of a child's vocabulary & early reading skills. Quality is most important. (Katz)

Get age-appropriate books into homes of low-income families.

Two-thirds of America's children living in poverty have no books at home. Children who do not have access to books and do not read regularly are among the most vulnerable Americans. (Reading Is Fundamental)

Show moms the value of reading to and bonding with their babies.

Reading early and often teaches a baby about communication, language, colors, numbers, vocabulary and so much more.

Being talked to means getting attention and this makes the baby feel special, resulting in emotional growth and forming the base for a lifelong value system. (Thulaja)

Message From Our Leadership

2020 was a year that proved we are Stronger Together. Year four of our all-volunteer effort to make a difference in building literacy as a foundation for children in low-income communities brought its own share of unique challenges, chief among them the Covid-19 pandemic and the ensuing cancellation of Oktoberfest (our major fundraising event). But we adapted. We figured out new ways to raise funds. We developed new safety protocols for what we do and how we work with our partners under the "new normal". And we made effective use of two months of downtime during the C-virus lockdown to initiate new collaborations with other local literacy organizations ... with the same goals and aspirations ... to serve the same "at risk" kids that we do.

We exited our downtime stronger than when we had entered it – adding St. Louis Black Authors of Children's Literature, Ready Readers, Missouri Humanities and Alton Memorial Hospital (Member BJC Healthcare) to our existing partners to promote racial equity, our expanding Big Brothers Big Sisters program (to reach kids from preschool to age 12) and to broaden our service area to include the East Side in Illinois. With help from the people at Lents & Associates our story was well told. And with more help from Darrell Smith and Clickactive LLC we have a completely reimagined, vastly improved and much more functional www.booksfornewborns.com web site.

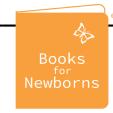

Before year's end we had expanded libraries at six Ronald McDonald House facilities, added Birthright STL (8th), Birthright St. Charles (9th) and Mercy Clinic Pediatrics (#10) as major delivery partners and strengthened our Board by adding Julius B. Anthony, one of our area's best known and most widely respected literacy advocates. We had nearly doubled the number of book bags we had delivered over our first four years from 6,517 at year end 2019 to 11,450. We had raised $97,178 from generous donors and collected more than 5,725 donated books valued at over $37,460 for our Big Brothers Big Sisters program. And we had made the operational improvements in safety, logistics, controls and governance to empower us to grow as rapidly as additional insourced funding will permit. We're excited about what 2021 may bring.

We ARE Stronger Than Ever. We ARE Stronger Together.

We entered our first significant collaboration -- with St. Louis Black Authors of Children's Literature -- in early March, but its launch was delayed to mid-June due to Covid-19 non-emergency supplies lockdowns at delivery partner hospitals. By ordering a year's supply of "Baby's First Day" (left) up front to enable a cost effective 3,500 copy production run and having our new St. Louis Black Authors partners provide them at cost, we were able to add a 5th bonus book that promotes racial equity without replacing any of our carefully-selected initial four.

The addition of these special co-branded books (intro page at left) received major media attention, including a widely-viewed spot by Steve Harris on KMOV-TV 4 News, when Courtnae's book was first stuffed into bags (right) for delivery to reopened hospitals on June 9th.

Julius B. Anthony (right), St. Louis Black Authors of Children's Literature's President, joined our Board in March. He has balanced being an effective ambassador for his organization and its Believe program with making a significant contribution to our success ever since. We have renewed our arrangement for 2021 and look forward to years of effective partnership on literacy with Julius and the authors in his organization.

THE MISSION

We put children first. St. Louis Black Authors of Children's Literature is committed to fostering awareness about the importance of early literacy by creating innovative opportunities for all kids to have access to Black children's literature.

THE VISION

Ensuring all children become confident and competent readers by the end of third grade.

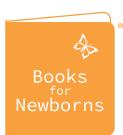

Books for Newborns adds new author for distribution to enforce message of racial equality

READER

Read to your child every day.

Read from the Start

Our second significant collaboration was with Missouri Humanities, whose Read from the Start program trains the trainers by teaching adults how to most effectively read to children. Missouri Humanities extended its efforts on literacy initially by donating 629 books (51 in Spanish) with a retail value of $6,000 to us. They were so well received that they added 1,592 more (worth $7,650) later in the year.

That's 2,221 books valued at $13,650 in all – our largest inbound gift ever! And, more importantly, 740 more book bags to distribute to preschool to age 12 older siblings of the newborns we serve and to other older children who receive outpatient therapy or are hospitalized due to accidents or injuries of their own as part of our rapidly expanding Big Brothers Big Sisters initiative. It's good to have humane people by our side.

Big Brothers Big Sisters got another huge boost from our third significant collaboration with Ready Readers. This preschool classroom-based literacy organization, which donated more than 90,000 books to 10,000 low-income preschool children last year, entered into a two-year partnership through which Ready Readers is providing 500 books & "Tips for Growing a Reader" cards each year for distribution to the older siblings of the newborns that we serve.

The initiative originally focused on children at SSM Health Cardinal Glennon in the City of St. Louis, but expanded to reach more kids through other area hospitals. We both serve the same broad population of kids and distributing books to our families expands Ready Readers' reach to kids not lucky enough to attend one of the preschools that they serve, provides a solid base on which to build and > introduces families to programs they might access once their children reach preschool age.

What We Do

When children are young, their eyes, ears and brains work together at an astonishing pace to begin making sense of the world. Reading to children during this time is key to building vocabulary and establishing the foundation for literacy and lifelong learning.

At Ready Readers, we send trained volunteers into classrooms in lowincome communities to read aloud to preschoolers, sparking imaginations and building early literacy skills in preparation for kindergarten. We stock classroom shelves with gift books and provide books for each child to keep and enjoy at home. Together with our community partners, we provide literacy-related experiences to extend kids' love of reading beyond the classroom walls.

BJC HealthCare

Thanks to a $5,000 venture grant from Ameren Illinois we were able to establish our first delivery collaboration that broadened our service area to St. Louis communities on the east side in Illinois. Ameren Illinois chose Alton Memorial Hospital, a member of the BJC Healthcare network, for our first venture across the river.

Elaine Kane, the new Assistant Superintendent of Educational Services for the Alton School District first learned of Books for Newborns when she watched our founder, Richard Nix, Sr., being interviewed while receiving a check from Christmas in St. Louis on TV at the 2017 Thanksgiving Day Parade. Once Ameren Illinois funded the program we were able to make our first delivery of 100 newborns and 20 Big Brothers Big Sisters book bags to nurses at the Women's Health and Childbirth Center on June 22nd. The Alton School District took over most delivery duties for 200 more newborns book bags, as well as for 140 more Big Brothers Big Sisters bags starting midyear for older siblings and in late October for children receiving outpatient therapy services at the hospital.

Kristie Baumgartner, the new Superintendent of Schools for the Alton School District (left); Rusty Ingram, Director of Business Development & Physician Services for the hospital (center); and Mike Hogan, Books for Newborns Chairman (right) celebrated what Elaine and Richard succeeded in creating.

In December, we expanded our reach further to serve expectant new mothers who are receiving confidential counseling and support from Birthright STL and Birthright St. Charles. The Birthright STL organization (www.birthrightstl.org) has four offices in Brentwood, Hazelwood, the Central West End and Mehlville who serve up to 1,000 expectant new mothers each year. Birthright St. Charles (www.birthrightstcharles.org) serves another 500 in St. Charles, O'Fallon and surrounding communities from their office in St. Charles.

The vast majority (80 to 90%) of these women live at or below the poverty line. And as many as half of them also have older infants and preschoolers who can benefit from our companion reading program for older siblings. Combined, they reach as many new mothers as all but our very largest hospital partner.

Many thanks to Ona Doyen, who had worked at the St. Charles site. for getting us all connected.

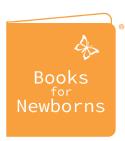

Ronald McDonald House Charities

Dan Harbaugh President

Stronger Than Ever & Stronger Together includes new ways of working collaboratively with all sorts of organizations who exist solely to help kids and their families. And what better time to encourage reading than when kids have too much time on their hands and parents are looking for ways to distract and entertain their healthy children who have tagged along when a sibling is hospitalized?

RONALD MCDONALD

HOUSE CHARITIES®

Working together, we established mini reading libraries in three of Ronald McDonald House Charities St. Louis' residential houses that serve families at BJC Kingshighway, Children's and SSM Health Cardinal Glennon and in three hospital-based "family rooms" at Children's (two rooms, including one dedicated to the NICU) and Mercy. This program expands what we do through the first three hospitals (which serve tens of thousands of kids each year). The family room at Mercy creates a chance to support other literacy programs already in place there. In October, we built a Spanish/English library for the South & Central American families they serve through the World Pediatric organization. With luck, these libraries will be the base for other programs in years to come.

Mercy Tkids Mercy Clinic Pediatrics

Our final delivery partner addition for the year was the three Mercy Clinic Pediatrics locations that care for children on the city's south side and in our southern and southwestern suburbs. 8 MDs and 30 support staff in three offices see over 1.000 newborns each year and care for several

1,000 newborns each year and care for several thousand more preschool & elementary school kids who stay with their pediatricians through childhood. The vast majority, though not all, are self pay or on Medicaid, many from immigrant families. Harrison Uhrhan, shown here with mom Allycia and dad Daniel, was the first child to receive a bookbag through our program.

turn the page STL

The best way to ensure that our work complements – rather than competes with – others focused on literacy in St. Louis is to know what each of us are doing and explore ways to work together towards the goals we share. Participating in the turn the page STL collaborative fosters both.

They, too, get that we are much Stronger Together.

Other Connections

Foster & Adoptive Care Coalition

Melanie Scheetz

Special thanks to Melanie Scheetz, Executive Director of Foster & Adoptive Care Coalition, another local kid-focused organization that celebrated its 30th year of helping to find families for kids in the foster care system in 2019. When the pandemic put an extended temporary halt to their ability to deal directly with kids and families, Melanie introduced us to people with whom they work who were willing to shift focus Executive Director to work with Books for Newborns for a while.

Thanks to Melanie, we connected with Justine Megee at Usborne Books & More for a significant donation of new books (at right) and to Arleen Meadows at the Carolyn Close Stuart chapter of the DAR in Lake St. Louis for a new joint program that delivers their service committee's Books & Bears packets to children at our City hospitals (page 13). Melanie also made us aware of (and vouched for us with reviewers at) potential grant opportunities at The Saigh Foundation, Home State Health and Carney's Kids. We applied to all three, have been awarded $3,000 by Carney's Kids and are hopeful for more good news from the other two in January.

International Institute Saint Louis

After 40 years serving inbound migrants and refugees,

Anna Crosslin knew exactly who to connect us with when Missouri Humanities gave us more Spanish and Spanish/English books than we could possibly use. Two e-mails later we were donating 72 books to the ESOL Bilingual Migrant Program (St. Louis Public Schools), 48 more to St. Francis Community Services (a Catholic Charities agency) & 180 to launch a new program for 7 FSI children at International Institute itself.

Anna Crosslin President & CEO INTERNATIONAL

USBORNE Books & More

Justine Megee, who works at a local Montessori school and as a consultant for Usborne Books & More, found us indirectly through Foster & Adoptive Care Coalition. She used the commissions she had earned from a charity book sale she hosted to purchase and donate 117 new books (that's 39 bookbags) to us for use in our rapidly expanding Big Brothers Big Sisters program.

Major "In Kind" Supporters

SPORTS ENERGIZERS

Books for Newborns received significant help from one of its generous vendors. Thanks to a random conversation while picking up some work done by Sports Energizers -- a locally owned screen printing and embroidery shop in Breckenridge Hills -- and a family connection between the owners and Scholastic Publishing, Sports Energizers donated >300 high value Scholastic children's books with a retail value over $3,000 to help us serve the older siblings of our newborns and preschool and older children staying at area hospitals. Enough to fill another 100 Big Brothers Big Sisters bookbags.

Help sometimes comes from unexpected sources. And this help is more proof that we can make a real difference in improving literacy -- be much stronger -- by working together.

LENTS & ASSOCIATES

As we exited the Covid-19 lockdown mid-June Books for Newborns had a great message to share about all the ways we had used our time during the lockdown to work together with others toward our common goals. But we had no special skills or unique points of access through which to share it. In stepped Peggy Lents and Lents & Associates. They helped shape how we talked about ourselves, created and executed an effective media strategy and provided

The Art of Entertaining

Since Day 1, Books for Newborns has relied on generous business owners like Ann Marie Lemcke of The Art of Entertaining for donated goods and services that keep our costs as low as possible to put most of the money we raise into books for the kids we serve.

In four years they have donated more than 2,000 of the bags we use for delivery. 2,000! That's a lot of "atta girls" Ann! Thanks!

Butler's Pantry & The Nix Family

No Nix family? No Books for Newborns. Whether they know it or not, thousands of local kids should be thankful, as we are, for Richard Senior's vision and all that the Butler's Pantry organization has provided to support us since Day 1. Storage and book packing space. Donated staff.

And -- of course -- amazing donated food at events.

Matt Kimball

A friend steered local children's author Matt Kimball to our Facebook page and he liked what he saw so much that he donated 70 signed hardcover copies of his first book for our Big Brothers Big Sisters program. Matt wrote the 38-page illustrated rhyming book for his nephew, who liked – you guessed it – trains and chocolate pudding.

Paula Brazill Wallrich

Moved by having followed our work on Facebook from her home in suburban Chicago, Paula applied her skills with a needle to donate a dozen hand-crocheted octopi for use in the NICUs at SSM Health's St. Mary's and Cardinal Glennon Children's hospitals. It's great to have such talented friends.

Honoring Tradition ~ Continuing Excellence

At the end of every school year, Reed School librarian Julie Stone combines books the library will no longer be using with others donated by parents and recycles them to children who would not otherwise have books to read over the Summer. With help from Advisory Board member and Reed School mom Susan McBride, Books for Newborns was chosen as this year's recipient of a mix of 1,342 new, "like new" and used books valued at $7,200 -- the 4th largest inbound gift in our history.

More than 500 of these books in new or "like new" condition will produce 165 Big Brothers Big Sisters bookbags. The remainder -- which are oversized, have library markings or are more suitable for use as a selection of reference books on science, arts and crafts, American and World history, culture and other subjects -- will be repurposed for use in under-resourced children's center and school libraries across our region. You rock, Reed!

Ladies with Books & Bears

Daughters of the American Revolution We are always on the lookout for personal touches we can provide nurses at area hospitals to brighten the day of a child (or a mother) in need of some special TLC. So we were delighted by the Books & Bears Committee of the Caroline Close Stuart DAR Chapter's offer to give us their book & stuffed animal sets to do just that. We have been sprinkling 20 of them a month into deliveries since October. And we look forward to using their kits to put smiles on the faces of many more kids in the years to come. Sometimes it's just fun being Stronger Together.

Ed Wheatley

This generous local sports historian & founder of the St. Louis Browns Historical Society & Fan Club, who has written several books and produced Emmy-winning documentaries about baseball in St. Louis – gave us 10 signed copies of his beautifully illustrated Incredible Cardinals kids book & introduced us to Josh Stevens at Reedy Press (see page 14).

Young Moms & Other Book Drives

Two volunteers with young kids who have outgrown some of their books ran "like new" used book drives among young mom friends to gather nearly 600 books for us. Their success led Advisory Board member Eileen Dreyer to call fellow Advisory Board member and author Susan McBride, which quickly resulted in a huge influx of books for our older kids from Reed School in Ladue (see page 13). As the year progressed, others added drives of their own. All in, these drives provided 686 books for our programs.

Becky Chrum 401 Books Stephanie Dobson 185 Books Amy Truitt (20 Minutes to Fitness in Clayton) 100 Books

Josh Stevens

Upon seeing what client Ed Wheatley was doing to support us, local publisher Josh Stevens donated an assortment of coffee table books from his other authors for the confident older readers we serve.

The McClellans & BraceforImpact46

Former World Series Champion pitcher Kyle McClellan and his wife Bridget, who serves as Executive Director of their BraceforImpact46 foundation, saw our Facebook posts about the great things going on at Books for Newborns & donated 150 children's books for our growing Big Brothers Big Sisters program. Their own foundation is making a big impact for orphan kids in Haiti & North St. Louis families in need.

What A Way to End the Year!

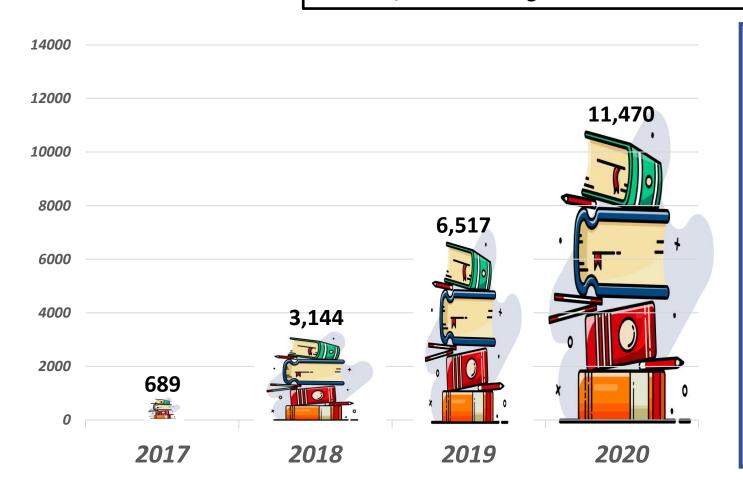

Just as we were preparing to turn the page on a very challenging – but successful – year, Cheryl Nanney and colleagues at Midwest Library Service showed up with a wonderful New Year's Eve surprise. 380 new "excess inventory" books, aimed primarily at older children, worth more than $4,000, making them the newest member of our "Books for a Month Club". 125 more older siblings with new bags full of books!

Books for Newborns distributes 10,000th book bag at Alton Memorial Hospital Oct 30, 2020

Joellen Corona, a speech therapist at Alton Memorial Hospital, helps 11-year-old Ella Curry of Alton read some of the books from the 10,000th book bag donated by Books for Newborns, which was delivered this week to AMH. Books for Newborns got its start donating books to new mothers, but is also now donating books for older children undergoing therapy.

Books for Newborns, a local all-volunteer nonprofit organization founded in 2017 that provides book bags to low-income new mothers and children at no cost, just delivered its 10,000th book bag. In its first three years and nine months, the charity has delivered more than 41,000 books valued at more than $390,000 to economically challenged children across the St. Louis area.

Ella Curry, an 11-year-old receiving outpatient therapy at Alton Memorial Hospital (member BJC Healthcare), was the lucky girl who received the 10,000th book bag on Oct. 29. To mark the occasion, Ella also received an autographed copy of local author Ed Wheatley's beautifully illustrated "Incredible Cardinals" children's book and an Usborne Books & More mini-reading library.

Our Re-imagined CLICKACTIVE Website

With a huge thank you to Darrell Smith, who owns and runs Clickactive LLC, we start our 5th year with a completely redesigned, fully-functional website capable of doing all that's needed to keep interested parties informed and enable us to receive feedback, inquiries and donations via the Web. Darrell gave us far more of his time than he charged for to re-imagine and reconstruct the site from scratch on Wordpress. And Clickactive LLC will host, update the content of and maintain the site from here on out.

Among other things, the site will allow visitors to learn more about our:

- ✓ History, vision, mission, goals, plans & programs
- ✓ Collaborative partnerships with like-minded organizations and our results against the ambitious targets we have set for ourselves
- ✓ Our Board, Advisory Board, volunteers, delivery & literacy collaboration partners and major donors
- ✓ Upcoming events and opportunities to volunteer to help Books for Newborns have an even bigger impact on the children and families we serve.

For the first time we will be able to provide easy access to the latest news about our activities -- including links to press coverage, video, and audio archives -- as well as annual and monthly progress reports. And our posts on Facebook and other social media will feed directly to the News & Social Posts section of the site.

Visitors have already begun making one-time and ongoing donations through easy-to-use and safe links to Pay Pal and other third-party processors, signing up to participate in volunteer activities and contacting us about questions or things they have on their minds.

"Everybody can be great ... because anybody can serve. You don't have to have a college degree to serve. You don't have to make your subject and verb agree to serve. You only need a heart full of grace. A soul generated by love."
